MISCELLANEOUS READING. [COMMUNICATED. TO ERIN-BY C. B ... OF MARYLAND. O why do you slumber, ye children of Erin?

Why yield to the thoughts of remorse and despair? At the shrine of lost beauty, why always are kneeling? Which your sighs and beseechings in vain can repair. Each tear that you shed, for a home and a re fuge, In the land of your childhood, 'neath Erin's green trees; Each sigh you send up for your down-trodden country,

Weighs naught to the evils which in turn you receive. Then why should you linger, oppressed and benighted ! Where the thoughts of the past are heavy and chill. Why bow 'neath reflections of hopes that are blighted ! Why call into action that memory still.

Doth England's proud trumpet, O! Erin, enchant Hath its strains of sweet music a home in thy heart ! Doth its banner which waves so menacingly o'er thee.

Give a calm to thy sorrows, or deaden their smart ! Knowest thou that the chain of oppression is

'round thee ? That its clankings but herald thy march to the tomb. Knowest thou, that the laurels your birthright assigned thee, Have been torn from your brow, in their spring time of bloom? Come then, ye oppressed, where young freedom awaits thee,

To the land of Columbia, across the wide sea, Where no sound save the accents of friendship will greet thee, Land of sweet memories, land of the free! She owes no allegiance, to high-handed power.

In size with it compares.

Its shape no eye can brook,

Its use is doubtful too; It but imparts a barefaced look, And brings much cheek to view. Her dress may please the Swell For its swollen exuberance: She looks a Monster Belle In such Big Ben expanse. Those air tubes filled with gas

The small boys mark it as they pass, And screech out: "Ah Balloon A parasol she bears For ornament, not use: For comfort, gloves she wears Too tight, and sleeves too Behind ner hangs a hood Just level with her chin,

Might lift her to the moon;

To put a baby in. Of her hair she shows the roots, Sham flowers the rest conceal; And she's crippled by her boots With the military heel: Streets off you hear them stalk

An Indian Squaw might find it good

And she seems to waddle more than walk Her hoops so sway about. Her figure may be good, But that no eye can tell; A mere lay-figure wou'd Show off her dress as well She may have ankles neat,

But they're concealed by skirt,

Which chiefly serves to hide her feet,

And gather up the dirt.
